justice may not be worked with impunity.

THE issue of testimony between Col. Lowe of Galveston and Col. Bonner of Tyler seems to be sharply defined.

ONE man away out on the Cleburne road should have no more voting power than one man in any of the old wards. FORT WORTH has not reached that stage of development where personal ment to the city's growth. WHENEVER Fort Worth is made up of "rotten boroughs," so to speak, the public should keep a close eye on municipal legislation. Power wrongly acquired leads to abuse of power. THE admission of the Eighth ward is a monstrous injustice. It turns over the interests of a majority, who have been taxed for years in behalf of the city's growth, to the rule of a minority.

ALL that the public demands is the news. This THE GAZETTE gives them, as in the case of the International investigation, which THE GAZETTE reports daily by wire "in regular order." THE GAZETTE'S report of the investigation is not two days old when published.

WHAT is back of the Eighth ward admission? There is no justice in the admission of the ward: what, then, is it? What does this signify for the future of Fort Worth? Why should municipal legislation be placed in the hands of the minority? What's up?

THE admission of the Eighth ward will be the Trojan horse within the walls of Fort Worth. THE GAZETTE desires to put this on record as a prophecy. And the city will find very soon after the accomplishment of the injustice, what the full cost will be to the city.

SILVER is advancing in price. Specilators are getting it through their heads that the big Democratic majority in the lower house of congress and the Democratic minority in the senate acting with the Western Republicans, mean to see that silver is put on a parity with gold.

UNLESS the people of Fort Worth make themselves heard now it will be too late hereafter. When one man in one ward is given the same power of taxation and legislation that three or four or five men have in other wards there is peril to the interests of the majority. Taxation without representation is the one tyrant especially hateful to free America. Let the people speak now, before the tyranny is fastened upon them.

THE Democrats of Texas are practically unanimous on tariff reduction and free coinage of gold and silver, and an issue by the government of sufficient legal tender to supplement the volume of circulation. The question still remains, how are you to get this additional circulation into the channels of commerce? Shall it be by a banking system of some kind? By a system of deficits or pubindividual citizens? This is the issue, and there will be no dodging it.

THE Democratic voter is about as nuch opposed to do-nothingism as he s to Know-nothingism. He don't intend to take too much for granted from his representatives or candidates, and certainly not everything on faith. He is going to stick to the party, and if anybody must go, it will be the leader who wants to keep the party shrinking issues and bowing down to Eastern managers. The Democratic voter knows the party is his even if individual chicken-pie eaters are left out.

WHEN you dispose of the national bank act, the sub-treasury, the deficit scheme, the Gibbs bill, etcetefa, the issue still remains. By what method are you to get the legal tender out of the United States treasury into the channels of commerce? This is the question every man is asking the Democratic party to answer. You can't answer them with a speech on the tariff, for they are unanimous in Texas on that issue, and want the financial issue to go along with it, and a specific national Democratic platform on both

IF the cattlemen are going back in the Cherokee Strip, as is reported, they will find that Jordan is a hard road to travel when the government gets hold of them, and it can not be said that they won't deserve what they get. President Harrison ordered them to vacate the Strip by the 1st of November of last year, but at their earnest entreaties he gave them thirty days more, upon the agreed condition that they would get their herds out by December 1 and stay out. If they, or any considerable number of them, have now violated that agreement and defied the president by returning to the forbidden lands, they are going to feel the weight of the presidential displeasure come down upon them like a pile-driver.

A HISTORICAL REMINISCENCE. The negotiations now going on beween the state department at Washington and the Dominican government for the purchase of Samana bay bring to mind the troubles in the Republican party which caused their first serious split after the war. It was about this same Samana bay. A parcel of adventurers in San Domingo got together and devised a scheme, to sell that country to the United States. Grant had just been injunction suit and a consequent depre- elected president for the first time. Orville E. Babcock stood close to the terested him in the scheme. His influence brought Grant to take a favorable view of it, whose military education showed him the advantages of Samana bay as a coaling station for our navy. He went ahead without consulting congress, and negotiated a treaty for the purchase of the territory of San Domingo, including Samana bay. When the treaty was submitted to congress it was rejected almost without consideration. Charles Sumner politics may be indulged without detriled the attack on it, and binted that there was corruption in the job. Grant grewvery angry, and a breach began between him and Sumner that soon got beyond healing. Sumner lashed Grant in his speeches, and Grant cut off ail of Sumner's patronage, and used his influence in the senate to have Sumner deposed from position as chairman of the committee on foreign affairs. They never became reconciled. Out of this contest sprang the animosities that led to so many Republicans leaving that party and joining the Liberal Republican movement of 1870 and 1872.

Grant's view of the value of Samana bay was correct from the point of the soldier, and the importance now attached to acquiring that body of water as a naval station vindicates his judgment, though it is not proposed to go so far as he went. We do not want the whole country, with its barbarous population of negroes, but a good harbor for our navy would be of a value too great to be estimated in case of war with a naval power.

THE SUB-TREASURY BILL.

As the friends of that measure know, THE GAZETTE has never been an admirer of the sub-treasury bill. This paper favors financial as well as tariff reform. But it cannot and will not lend its countenance to visionary, crude and half baked theories that on their very faces bear the imprint of the prentice hand that made them.

What is the sub-treasury idea? What do its advocates propose to do, and how? These are queries that call for an answer. They are made in good faith, and are addressed to men of sense and knowledge, not to political parvenues and charlatans. We know very well what the orators say about it, how they dilate on the virtues of it and exult over the financial millenium it is to inaugurate. But Darius Green and his flying machine promised as much until both met with a dull thud.

The friends of that measure are not ingenuous. They employ only glittering generalities in talking about it. They decline to say how it is to be operated-what specific plan shall be employed for that purpose, what the exact mode of execution. "Oh, that is a mere matter of detail," they say. All we urge now is the principle. The rest can be determined later." Can it? Was that the way Chase conceived the plan of the national banking system, or Sherman the plan of specie resumption? Is that the way in which able men announce grave theories of reform or amelioration? Is that the way in which theories or hypotheses in science or politics are given out? Is that the way in which the financial theory of lie improvements? By a loan to the the sub-treasuryites was originally broached? Is it not a fact that it came before the people formulated in a bill in congress, in which bill every detail of the plan was specified? Is it not true also that the moment the bill was introduced it was severely criticised on every hand-that lawyers, statesmen, politicians, the press and all thinking men made sport of it, and treated it with mockery and derision? Is it not a fact that, in consequence of the ridicule heaped upon it, the friends of the bill dropped it, ran away from it, and have never since ventured back to even give their deserted bantling a decent burial? Ever since they abandoned the bill its friends have been prattling about "principle." They are mighty sticklers for the principle of the bill. Well, as to that, all we have to say is, that any bill that comes before congress with as grand and glorious a principle as that said to be the ground-work of the sub-treasury bill, would never fail to become a law. Whatever errors of detail it may contain would speedify be corrected, and the measure be given practical shape and effect. No bill containing a radically sound principle of financial reform would ever be treated, in congress or out of it, with contempt and ignominy merely because of faults in the details of it. A legislative body that would refuse to consider, or contemptuously ignore a bill for that reason alone, would manifest no better sense than would the man who should throw his gold chronometer in the river because the hair spring was broken.

If, therefore, there is a valuable principle in the sub-treasury bill, it must of necessity be a working principle: one that can easily be put into operation. Unless the advocates of the 'principle" give us some definite idea of the "how," the modus operandi of their bill, the country is bound to rest in the belief that congress treated it as well as it deserved.

REALTY AND BUILDING.

The outlook for Fort Worth was never better than it is right at this time. Every move made now is upward and denotes progress, and to those who watch th progress, and to those who watch the signs of the times it is apparent that Fort Worth is just now beginning to take on its second growth, that growth which fills out and solidifies, which gives muscle and hardens the bone. Of the seven places in Texas known as cities, all have had this second growth except Fort Worth. The growth of these other cities must be by slow accretion or spasmodical from this slow accretion or spasmodical from this time on. For ten years to come this city will grow as no city has ever grown be-fore. She will develop from forces already at work and from natural causes. The foundation has been laid broad and deep, and now the superstructure will begin to rise. In 1894 the Fort Worth of 1891 will be but a memory. People who do not live in Fort Worth see this better than we do nd wonder why it is there is not greater activity among our own people.

Fort Worth people are meeting their maturing real estate paper in a very satisfactory manner. Yesterday they paid off $10,730 as shown by the records. Most of this lifted vendor's lien notes from property on which first and second payments had been made.

The Federal Building.

At last it looks as if some active steps were being taken in regard to Fort Worth's government building. Word was received from Washington yesterday to the effect that the United States district attorney had passed on the title to the block selected by the treasury department, and reported the title absolutely without flaw—perfect in every detail. It is now said that the archievery detail. It is now said that the archi-tect at Washington is at work on plans for the building here. The government had a number of plans prepared, but the site at Fort Worth being an entire block, it was found the plans would not suit. A gentle-man of this city who is interested has been informed that the building here will be a massive and at the same time a beautiful structure. It will be so con-structed that vast additions can be made to it at any time, as the government business grows, without destroying the symmetry of the building. The word comes from Washincton that in three or four months work will be under way. The money to pay for the building, $175,000, is ready for use, being at present locked up in the government's strong box. An effort will be made to have the red Pecos stone used in the building. building.
